GUNMAN WHO FLED WITH JADE LOOT STILL AT LARGE

Belief Advanced Fugitive Who Shot Woo Sing-faung Has Fled With Accomplice

POLICE ISSUE CIRCULARS

Condition Of Victim Remains Unchanged—Has Chance For Recovery

No trace was discovered by the police yesterday of the mysterious assassin who attempted to murder Woo Sing-faung, curio dealer, and fled with jade jewels valued at Taels 5,000 after he had left the Chinese merchant for dead in the entrance to a foreign home at 1800 Great Western Road last Monday afternoon.

Woo Sing-faung's condition remained unchanged through the day yesterday and though the bullet that was fired at him at close range penetrated all the way through his head entering behind the left ear and emerging just beneath the right eye, destroying the sight of that member, it is believed now that unless complications develop that he will recover. He is still at the Red Cross hospital whither he was carried after the jewel robbery took place.

PAINSTAKING SEARCH

The most painstaking search of all corners of Shanghai is being conducted by the police and in the course of this man hunt yesterday, after a score of persons had been questioned at Hongkew Police Station, two suspects whose dress and appearance tallied with descriptions of the fugitive were taken to the hospital. In both cases the Chinese victim, who has remained conscious, answered in the negative when asked to identify the men.

It is now apparent that the robber planned his escape with as much thoroughness as he planned the crime and it is thought not unlikely that the man and an accomplice have fled from Shanghai to another city. In order to assist police of other cities as well as the general public here with details concerning the fugitive descriptive circulars were issued yesterday by the police department.

SUSPECT ACCOMPLICE

The failure of the police to find trace of the ricsha in which the gunman made his escape from in front of the Webster home after he had shot Woo Sing-faung has given rise to the belief that the puller of the ricsha was an accomplice disguised as a ricsha coolie who played a part in the crime that carefully had been assigned to him. It also is taken as probable that the assailant himself was in disguise when he set out to commit the crime and wore clothing of a kind to which he was unaccustomed.

THE DESCRIPTION

The police description of the fugitive built upon carefully checked statements of all those who saw him from the time that he first entered the Bubbling Well curio shop last Saturday until he

Twenty Billion Pounds Cost Of War To Europe

London, August 24.—The actual cost of the war to European belligerents was in excess of £20,000,000,000, represented by property destroyed, losses in investments abroad, depreciation of properties, and by pensions, Edgar Crammond, English financier, told the Bankers Institute at a recent meeting here.

He fixed the following as the real losses of the European belligerents:

Germany, £8,700,000,000; France, £6,250,000,000; The United Kingdom, £5,200,000,000; Italy, £2,100,000,000; Belgium, £550,000,000.

ONLY TWO PROFITED

To only two belligerent countries—the United States and Japan—did the war bring prosperity, Mr. Crammond said, but Spain, Holland, Switzerland, Greece, and Scandinavia, also had grown wealthier. He believed the "liquid capital of the world, now distributed in centers which are unaccustomed to the exercise of their new powers," would eventually again find its chief outlet through London.

"The war has produced an extraordinary change in the economic relations of the United States with Europe," he said. "Whereas, in 1914 America owed Europe £2,000,000,000 at present Europe owes America £2,000,000,000.

Assuming that the post-war purchasing power of the dollar was 70 percent of its pre-war value, Mr. Crammond said during the past five years there had been an actual increase in the national wealth of the United States of approximately 30 percent, and he estimated this wealth now in the neighborhood of £70,000,000,000 to £80,000,000,000.

JAPAN'S WEALTH DOUBLED

The national wealth of Japan, he estimated, had been doubled by the war.

On the basis of a post-war mark valued at 50 percent of its pre-war value he estimated Germany has lost, apart from the indemnity, 26 percent of her national wealth, the whole of her mercantile marine, all her colonial possessions, and practically the whole of her investments abroad. If the figures suggested at the Hythe conference £6,250,000,000, were fixed as the German war indemnity he declared the total losses of the German people arising out of the war would be equivalent to about £15,000,000,000 or one-half her national wealth.

NOT YET "GOING CONCERN"

"So far as the world as a whole is concerned the principal loss is in the fact that Europe is not yet 'a going concern,'" he continued, "but the underlying economic forces which made her the great center of the world's commercial activities are still at work and will rapidly transform the economic situation in Europe."

He said the dominant characteristic of international trade in the next 10 years will be a tremendous world demand for capital, and the internal financial policies of the nations should be framed with due regard to this condition.

Tuchun Says Warships Are Selling Arms Here; Italian Charge Denied By Official

Lu Yung-hsiang Reports Contract Arranged By His Agents In Shanghai—Matter Has Been Adjusted, Says Captain Ferrajolo

Charges made by Tuchun Lu Yung-hsiang of Chekiang that sales of arms were being arranged from Italian warships in Shanghai in flagrant violation of the international convention governing munitions sales to Chinese were denied last night by Capt. Raeffaele Ferrajolo, executive official of the Italian consulate. Captain Ferrajolo spoke for Mr. G. de Rossi, Italian Consul-General, who was absent.

The charges of the Chekiang Tuchun were made in a telegram addressed to the Diplomatic Corps at Peking through the doyen of that body, M. Boppe, the French Minister. In this telegram the tuchun explains that with the knowledge of the Shanghai authorities he appointed agents to make an investigation of reports of sales of arms to Chinese in Shanghai and he asserts in the message that these agents not only were able to enter into a contract with Italian agents for the purchase of arms, but also were able to discover that the arms they were to buy were stored aboard two Italian submarine chasers, named M-A-S 226 and M-A-S 227, that are moored in Soochow creek.

CHARGES DENIED

Captain Ferrajolo, speaking for his chief, denied last night that the charges made in the tuchun's message were true. He said no sales of arms to Chinese from stores aboard the M-A-S 226 and M-A-S 227 had been arranged or were contemplated.

Captain Ferrajolo went on to say that this whole matter had been brought up at the meeting of the Shanghai consular body that was held a week ago and he asserted at that time a full explanation had been given by the Italian Consul-Geeneral and that the matter had been satisfactorily arranged. The question had also been taken up with the Municipal Council by the Italian Consulate, he said, and repeated that a full understanding had been reached in connection with the matter.

As is generally known, he explained that the two submarine chasers M-A-S 226 and M-A-S 227 had been brought to Shanghai to be sold, presumably to the Chinese government, in accordance with an understanding reached some time ago at Peking. He went on to say that arms of various kinds were stored aboard the two vessels, but emphasised that these constituted only the ordinary armament of vessels of that type and were to be sold only with the boats at the time they were disposed of.

Captain Ferrajolo added that it was possible that in isolated instances members of the crews of the two boats may possibly have sold single weapons as individuals, though he knew of no such cases, and again said that no systematised sales on a large scale had taken place or could take place.

THE TUCHUN'S MESSAGE

In the matter of the charges the message of the Chekiang tuchun is plain and outspoken. A translation of the text of this telegram is as follows:

"M. Boppe,

"Doyen of Diplomatic Body, Peking:

"Your Excellency,

"In the month of June I, the Tuchun of Chekiang, and concurrently the Defense Commissioner of Shanghai, had been informed that certain foreigners had been smuggling arms and ammunitions and offering to sell them freely at Shanghai. In order that those arms and ammunitions may be kept from falling into the hands of bandits or be mischievous to the Chinese citizens as well as to foreigners, I appointed men to investigate this matter.

"In their investigation they used various plans and talked with foreigners many times, but the real condition of the case was yet unkown to them at that time. And, in order to find out the real condition of the case, my appointees, with the knowledge of the Municipal Police, pretended to enter into contract with the foreigners and agree to pay the purchase money on delivery of the goods, and thereby my appointees were brought to see the goods.

"Thereupon it was discovered that certain munitions of war had been stored in two Italian submarine chasers, marked M-A-S 226, M-A-S 227, flying the Italian Naval flag, and moored in the Soochow Creek at Shanghai. The real condition therefore began to become known after numerous plans having been exhausted.

"I submit that this incident amounts to a violation of the

CHANG'S FORCES WILL SUPPORT ADMINISTRATION

Fengtien War Lord Asserts Tuchuns Should Not Act Independently

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, September 1.—General Chang Tso-lin, interviewed yesterday afternoon by foreign correspondents, asserted that his troops were at the disposal of the Government and that Tuchuns, acting independently of the Government were wrong in so doing as all troops belonged to the Government. He approved the centralisation of military power under the Government.

With regard to the proposed People's Convention, General Chang Tso-lin said that only one such Convention had ever been held, namely in the United States, and he feared trouble from such an Assembly in China. He declared that nothing could be said concerning a new Parliament until the unification of the country had been established.

OBEYS GOVERNMENT

Asked what his policy in working for a solution of the present situation, General Chang replied that he was Governor of a Province and obeyed the Government's orders. He considered that the disbandment of troops should be carried out in accordance with the size of provinces. The General declared that it would be necessary to increase the number of troops in Manchuria as the place was so big. He said that his forces, not including police, numbered 300,000 men. A correspondent remarked that this was 100,000 more than the troops in the United States, in reply to which, General Chang pointed out that military expenses in America were much heavier than in China and that the cost of ten warships in America would equal the whole of China's military expenses.

Replying to the remark that America's revenue was much greater than China's, General Chang Tso-lin contended that there could be no comparison between their respective budgets. China needed more troops than America as they were necessary to maintain the Government.

MANCHURIAN BUDGET

Questioned regarding the Manchurian Budget, General Chang replied that Mukden had raised $10,000,000 for soldiery, Kirin $8,000,000 and Heilungkiang $5,000,000, while the Central Government contributed $4,000,000.

In reply to a further question, he said that he knew how to deal with General Semenoff, if he should enter Manchuria, and that he did not foresee trouble in Manchuria and Mongolia.

General Chang Tso-lin emphasised that he had no ambition for the Presidency or Vice-Presidency and that he did not desire personal honors. At the conclusion of the interview he announced that he was returning to Mukden in a few days' time.

Triple Alliance To Consider Walkout

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 30.—The Miners' ballot figures, which are still incomplete now total over 400,000 for a strike and 130,000 against a strike: the requisite two-thirds majority for a strike is therefore provided, but in view of the reluctance of other Trade Unions to support a strike there is a possibility that a way out may be found before September 4, when the strike notices are to be handed in.

Important developments are expected tomorrow when the Triple Alliance meets and the Railwaymen and Transport workers will decide the extent of their co-operation with the miners.

Chinese-English Dictionary By Mr. O. Z. Tsang

After five years of patient and accurate work, Mr. O. Z. Tsang, formerly teacher of translation of St. John's University, has published a complete "Chinese-English Dictionary," based on the arrangement of the "Kang Hsi Dictionary," compiled by the well-known emperor of the Tsing Dynasty.

Students of Chinese as well as of English are agreed that while there are many excellent dictionaries from English into Chinese, there is still a great need for a Chinese-English dictionary. In this work, the author has supplied what was wanted in a better way than it has ever been before.

The work contains 8,000-odd characters with no less than 200,000 phrases. Each of the characters is defined according to the parts of speech for which it can be used when translated into English. When a character has more than one English equivalent, all are given. Idioms, phrases, maxims, literary quotations and technical terms are inserted.

Phrases of English, French and Latin are collected and put side by side with the Chinese phrases of equivalent meaning. The author makes use of Wade's system of romanisation.

In his preface for the dictionary, Dr. F. L. Hawks Pott, President of St. John's University, says in part:

"He (the author) possesses the rare attainment both of a first rate knowledge of Chinese and of English and so was peculiarly fitted for the task which he set himself in preparing this Chinese-English Dictionary."

"We live at a time when it is very important that the East and West should understand one another more thoroughly. The English-Chinese Dictionary helps the Chinese to understand the West and in the same way the Chinese-English Dictionary will help the West to understand the Chinese.

"We hope this book will meet with the wide circulation which it deserves, and we feel that it is one of which it may truly be said Finis coronat opus."

Press Assails Old Hsu As Champion For Anfu Cause

Serious Charges Made Against Chief Executive For Favoring Outlaws And Keeping Parliament

Charging Old Hsu with using his influence in securing amnesty to the outlawed Anfu leaders and with preventing the dissolution of the Anfu Parliament, the Peking and Tientsin Times recently published the following article:

We have heard very little of the President since the arrival of Generals Chang Tso-lin and Tsao Kun in the capital, but such reports as we have received indicate that he has been using what influence he still possesses in favor of the Anfu Party, with a view to securing the immunity of its leaders from arrest and preventing the dissolution of the tuchuns' parliament.

Ten of the Anfu leaders, whose names have appeared on the list of those "wanted," are known to be enjoying Mr. Obata's hospitality, but others have not been so fortunate, and it seems strange, to say the least, that a number of prominent Anfuites whose names do not appear on the list of Mr. Obata's guests, still remain at large, and are reported not only to be in Peking, but to be frequent visitors at the Presidential mansion.

That the president should be shielding these men from arrest and punishment would appear incredible were it not for the well-known fact that he is strongly opposed to the dissolution of the Anfu Parliament, for fear that it may raise questions regarding the validity of his election to the presidential office.

On this point the president, who yields so gracefully to almost every other demand, from whatever quarter it originates, appears to be unusually stubborn, why it is not easy to understand.

LEGALITY QUESTIONED

The question whether he has been legally elected to the office which he has held with so little distinction since September, 1918 may seem a matter of tremendous consequence to him personally, but he can hardly expect his fellow-countrymen or foreigners, to attach such vital importance to his retention of the title of Chief Executive of a nation which has never acknowledged his sway, under the legal fiction that he is the choice of the Chinese people.

The latter, however, much as they may admire his scholarship, can hardly entertain great respect or admiration for a president who, so far as they are aware has never revealed the slightest strength of character or shown any real initiative, since he was pitchforked into office by the nominees of the Northern Tuchuns.

And it would, in the circumstances, be grotesque to pretend that his retention as Chief Executive is a necessity to the welfare of the state.

It is just possible that if a really representative legislature were convened H.E. Hsu Shih-chang might be confirmed in his office by a majority vote but if so it would be because there was no rival candidate of outstanding ability, and because as a mere figurehead he might be expected to do as much or as little as any other nominee.

But we really find it difficult to understand why one who has done so little to command public respect or support should cling so tenaciously to an office of the greatest responsibility, which brings him neither honor nor esteem at home or abroad.

The governing of a nation of four hundred millions of people who look to their Chief Executive for leadership and initiative, requires something more than literary ability, an amiable disposition, and punctilious respect for legal formalities the hollowness of which is common knowledge.

President Hsu has flung away opportunity after opportunity of proving his fitness for the position he has now filled for nearly two years, and he can hardly expect the millions of his fellow-countrymen who have looked to him for leadership, in vain, to feel as concerned as he appears to be about his retention of a Title which in practice has proved to be a Title and nothing else.

NO RIGHT OF RE-ELECTION

We cannot subscribe to the view that President Hsu's record during his term of office as Chief Executive gives him any prescriptive right to reelection if a legislature really representative of the whole country, should be brought into being.

The proteges whom he has appointed and maintained in office have done nothing to justify confidence in his judgment.

His vacillation in every crisis has materially contributed to China's difficulties.

He has been obstinate when he could best have served his country by yielding and yielding when he could best have served it by a display of firmness.

And many of the men whose names are anathema to his countrymen owe their advancement and maintenance in power, to his support.

LEGISLATURE POOR

With no legislature that can be considered in the slightest degree representative of the Chinese nation, it may be convenient that President Hsu Shih-chang should continue to reside in the Presidential mansion at Peking until a new Parliament comes into being, but in our opinion the best service he could render to his country would be to make it known at once that he does not intend to seek re-election when the new legislature assembles.

He was put into power as the nominee of the Anfu Party, his only title to the office is his election by a Parliament packed with the creatures of the Northern Tuchuns, and his sole merit has been his complacent acceptance of "advice" from those who secured his "election" for their own ends.

The self-esteem of an individual ought not to stand indefinitely in the way of the wise and firm leadership that China so urgently requires.

It ought not even to be a serious factor in the situation when the whole future of China is at stake.

BOGUSLY ELECTED

We have deemed it necessary to write frankly on this matter because there is only too good reason to fear that the desire of the president to retain his office, and secure confirmation of the bogus election by which he obtained the title of Chief Executive is a factor of considerable weight in Peking at the present moment, and one which is likely to militate against any serious attempt to reunite the country under a constitutional government.

We believe that a declaration that the President would place his resignation in the hands of the new Parliament would not only avert any question as to the legality of his title, but go far to convince the Chinese people the the choice of their rulers would henceforth be placed entirely in their hands.

The idea that President Hsu Shih-chang has established a vested interest in the Presidency is untenable.

That he can regain the confidence and respect of his country men after what has happened recently seems to us incredible.

Indeed we can see nothing to justify the retention of office by the President when the rule of the Constitution is restored, and countless objections to his harboring the intention of concentrating his efforts upon securing reelection when the legislature is convened."

Popular Theater To Be French Project

Paris, August 24.—A "popular theater" where plays and operas will be given under government direction has been definitely agreed upon by the Chamber of Deputies and it is believed by its supporters that the Senate will agree. The plan has long been contemplated.

A temporary appropriation of 100,000 francs was voted to start the new theater in the Trocadero Palace and the Comedie Francaise subsidy of 250,000 francs was doubled to enable it to present plays there.

Plays will be given nightly with two matinees at the Trocadero which seats 5,000.

A feature of the plan is the decision to make it a producing playhouse for the government conservatory for the training of actors and musicians.

SUBWAY FOR TOKIO PLAN OF PROMOTERS

Modern Sewage System To Be Constructed At Osaka And Harbor Is Enlarged

Tokio, August 26.—Tokio is to have a subway, the first in Japan, a charter for which has just been granted. This is part of a big plan for improvements in transportation facilities in Tokio and Osaka which will involve the expenditure of many millions of dollars. The decision of the authorities to undertake these improvements has followed bitter complaints of poor service.

Owing to the increasing population the street cars of Tokio are so overcrowded that it is a common sight to see passengers hanging dangerously from the platforms, while public taxicabs are insufficient to meet the demand. Tokio will spent $10,000,000 in street improvement.

OSAKA IMPROVEMENTS

A bigger project is under way for improving Osaka which Japanese often call the "Manchester of Japan" because it is the chief center of the country's cotton industry. The proposed improvement of the streets alone will cost about $75,000,000. A new harbor is being built which will cost about $30,000,000.

Fifty percent of Osaka's manufactured products are moved through the canals of the city and more will be dug. Fifty million dollars will be expended in constructing a modern sewage system.

Tokio and Osaka like New York, London and Paris lack lodgings for the people. It is quite impossible to hire either a "foreign-style" or Japanese home in Tokio. Hence the suburbs are constantly extending.

COVERS IMMENSE AREA

The city of Osaka covers an area of 14 square miles which is expected to be trebled when the project of greater Osaka is carried out. The population of 2,000,000 is increasing rapidly.

In Tokio and Osaka, as in New York, house rents are going up constantly and food is ever rising.

French Campaign To Combat Living Cost

Paris, August 25.—A determined campaign against the high cost of living in France has been inaugurated by the French press. "Buy nothing but the utmost necessities, drop in prices is coming" is caption which many newspapers carry in heavy black type in the center of their news sheets. Newspapers of all shades and opinion all over the country have joined in the campaign with the result that a noticeable fall in the wholesale prices has been realised. This has not yet affected retail prices, however. An appeal is to be made to the consumers to organise a week's strike to bring down the price of fresh vegetables.

JULY FIRE REPORT

The total number of calls to fires, or supposed fires, during the month was 14, as against for the corresponding month last year. The damage on assessed property within the Settlement is estimated at Tls. 5,295 (Foreign Tls. 2,025 Chinese Tls. 3,270), as against Tls. 200 (Foreign Nil: Chinese Tls. 200) during July, 1919. The property at risk is estimated at Tls. 520,000 (Foreign Tls. 480,000: Chinese Tls. 40,000) as against Tls. 30,000 (Foreign Nil: Chinese Tls. 30,000) for the corresponding period last year.

The following are municipal staff changes made for the week ending August 28:

Aland Islanders Demand Freedom In Government

Finland And Sweden Near Clash As Result Of New Situation

Stockholm, August 20.—A critical situation has arisen between Sweden and Finland over Sweden's attitude toward a delegation from the Aland Islands which represented to the Swedish government that the population of the islands desired self-determination on the basis of a referendum. After a sharp exchange of notes between the two governments a battalion of Finnish troops has been landed on Aland and encamped near Mariehamn.

The Finnish government has arrested two leaders of the Aland deputation on a charge of high treason.

NOTE TO FINLAND

Sweden has despatched a note to Finland urging that the government consent to a plebiscite by which the population of the islands would decide whether they shall belong to Sweden or Finland but it is understood the Finnish government is unshaken in its determination to oppose any such measure.

Official opinion here is that Finland's attitude is based upon the assumption that the initiative for separation of the Alands from Finland was taken in Sweden, whereas, it is declared, the agitation began with Alanders who based their right of self-determination on historical grounds and upon principles recognised by the League of Nations.

REJECTS ALL CLAIMS

The Finnish government has announced that it "absolutely rejects all such claims as are irreconcilable with her sovereignty over the Alands, which Sweden recognised without reservation."

The Aland archipelago, in the Gulf of Bothnia, consists of 80 inhabited islands, with a population of 24,000 of whom 12,000 reside on Aland island, the principal town of which is Mariehamn. The Islands formerly belonged to Sweden but were taken by Russia in 1809. The Finnish government holds that the political importance of the islands is so great that no Finnish government could cede them to a foreign power and that united with Sweden they would constitute a constant source of danger of Finland.

HEALTH HINTS FOR HOT WEATHER

How To Sustain Your Strength.

The most important thing of the sustainment of health and strength during the hot season is to keep your blood in good condition. Prolonged heat makes the blood thin and watery, and thus throws the weakened system open to attacks of fever, diarrhoea, dysentery and other maladies. When the blood is anaemic, or improverished, nervous ailments, dyspepsia, neuralgia and headaches result, and the whole body quickly gets into an unhealthy state.

There is nothing better to build up the blood and make it rich and red than Dr. Williams' pink pills; it is for this reason that these world-famous pills are so immensely popular as a blood and nerve tonic in tropical countries—throughout the equatorial East, Central and South America, and northern Australia, for example. By the aid of Dr. Williams' pink pills not only do men and women sustain their health and vigour in these lands of everlasting midsummer, but also many thousands of sufferers from maladies resulting from impure watery blood or disordered nerves have been restored by their use, indisputable evidence proving that they have cured almost countless cases of anaemia, indigestion, rheumatism, sciatica, malaria, as well as the special ailments of women.

Obtainable from chemists and medicine venders everywhere, Dr. Williams' pink pills for pale people can also be had from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai, at one dollar fifty cents the bottle, or eight dollars for six bottles, post free. If ailing or weak now let them begin to help you without delay.

VACILLATION is the prominent feature of weakness of character. If you enjoy the privilege of being head of the export department of your firm resolve at once that if it's Musk at all it's to be WIDLER'S MUSK. Forget all the other trade names by which MUSK is known, but remember WIDLER'S MUSK, the Musk you will eventually buy. Send Chinese Postal Money Orders for $300 to MR. AMERICAN ATHLETES WIN FOUR BRITISH AMATEUR ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION CHAMPIONSHIPS

B. G. D. Rudd, Of Oxford, Styled A World Beater, Wins Quarter And Half-Mile; U.S. Representatives Show Up In Hurdle Events

By PERCY RUDD

London, July 5.—There was a ruthless slaughtering of champions at Stamford Bridge today. Only two of the many who sought to defend their titles in the British Amateur Athletic Association championships prevailed over the opposition brought against them—B. Howard Baker, who set up a new record for the meeting of 6ft. 3¼in. in the high jump, and Percy Hodge, who scored an easy victory in the two miles steeplechase.

The British Isles won 11 of the titles competed for, America four, France three, and South Africa two.

EDWARDS'S GREAT FURLONG

Two dual winners of last year, W. A. and A. G. Hill, were among the fallen on Saturday, but we found two more runners versatile enough to win double firsts in Edwards and Rudd.

Edwards is at all West Indian member of the Polytechnic Harriers. Favored by a good start in the final for the 100 yards, when W. A. Hill and Osterlaak both got badly away, he gathered sufficient confidence to run a magnificent race in the furlong, his time for which—21 3-5sec.—places him well in the picture for Olympic honors. A beautiful long-striding runner, Edwards is probably not yet at his best.

The start for the sprint was not satisfactory the pistol being fired too quickly after the preliminary warning. As a result, Osterlaak, the South African, who had done 10sec. dead in his heat, was practically out of the race from the beginning, and Hill desperately as he tried, could never recover the lost ground. But Brown, a strong runner from Princeton University, and Hill were both fairly and squarely beaten by Edwards in the furlong.

IS RUDD A WORLD-BEATER?

B. G. D. Rudd, the Oxford President, is a wonder. He may break records at Antwerp, where he is to run for South Africa. Before racing began on Saturday, he might have been seen sitting in the stand smoking a big pipe! Yet he won the half mile by seven yards in 1min. 55 4-sec., without turning a hair, and beat the Cambridge president and title-holder, G. M. Butler, by nine yards in the quarter in 49 1-5sec. A natural athlete, who probably scarcely knows yet what serious training means, there is no telling what Rudd may be capable of, but he looks like a world-beater. He gained the Harvey Memorial Gold Cup for the best performance at the meeting.

A. G. Hill broke down as the result of his struggle with the Oxonian in the half, and could not turn out to defend his title in the mile. Here the new champion was found in A. Burt'n, a tall, nice-actioned Frenchman, who led from the half-mile onwards and won by 17 yards in the good time of 4min. 23sec. McPhee, the Scotsman, let him get too far ahead in the third lap, and could never make up the leeway. I am told that France has a better miler than Burtin in Guillemot. Other competing nations at Antwerp, please note!

BEST HURDLING FOR 20-YEAR

We saw some good hurdling, chiefly by the Americans, and the winning time of 15-5sec. is the best since A. C. Kraenzlein, another American, put up a championship record of the same figures in 1900. George Gray was only beaten by two yards, which makes the Salford man to have done the best performance of his career over this distance. The race would probably have been won by C. E. Erdman, another Princeton student and a perfect stylist of a hurdler, had he not fallen at the fifth flight.

In the walk, the Fowler-Dixon prize for style went to W. Hehir, of the Surrey A. C.

THE HERO OF THE EVENING

The hero of last evening was C. E. Blewitt, the Birchfield Harrier, who is a product of Army athletics. Blewitt is employed by the Great Western Railway, and he was working until 2 a.m. yesterday. Yet he ran a beautiful race, beating such giants of the track as his club mate, C. T. Clibbon, the Oxford University runner, E. A. Montague, the old Surrey man, A. H. Nichols, and a pertinacious and plucky Frenchman, Gaston Heuet.

These five practically had the race to themselves, though another Birchfield Harrier, W. Freeman, showed the way for the first mile, and J. Hatton, of Surrey A. C., showed prominently until the pace killed him. They ran in a detached bunch, but from one and a half miles onwards either Clibbon or Blewitt was always in front. Montague moved up into third place as the bell rang for the last lap, when Blewitt led, and he soon got in front of Clibbon, but Blewitt went off with a rare dash, full of running, and the further he went the bigger grew the space between the men.

Montague was the most distressed of all the runners at the finish, and Blewitt and the Frenchman the freshest. The latter came again in the straight to rob Clibbon of third place, after seeming to be beaten.

A HURDLES SURPRISE

The 440 yards hurdles provided a double surprise. The holder, G. H. Gray, who is not so young as he used to be, was beaten in his heat by Kent Hughes, of Oxford, and when the Army athlete, E. G. W. Harrison, spoilt his chance in the third heat by treading on the third hurdle from home, the race looked good for W. A. Adams, of Princeton University. The latter had comfortably beaten E. W. Weller, who qualified as fastest loser, but in the final Weller made light of his handicap in being drawn on the outside, and went off with such a burst of speed that no one could catch him. His time, 57 2-5sec. was quite good, and he is capable of beating it, for he slowed up twice at his hurdles, not for lack of stamina, but because he wasn't sure of his stride.

The winner of the hop, step and jump is a Midland discovery, who should put another four or five feet on to his record before Antwerp. Paoli, the weight-putter who was also second at throwing the discus, did not show his best figures. He has done 46ft. 5½in. in France—a native record; his winning putt last night was 43ft. 10in.

The Frenchmen were first and second at the half-mile in 2min. 9sec., but then McPhee raced by Pugh, but could not reach Burtin, who scored for France by 16 yards in 4min. 23sec. Tatham was third, just in front of Montague. A. G. Hill, the holder did not defend his title.

All Matter Of One Putt When Big Golfers Meet

BY GRANTLAND RICE

When golfers of the caliber of Chick Evans, Bobby Jones and Francis Ouimet meet in a 36-hole test, it seems to be all a matter of one putt.

Last August at Oakmont, after battling 35 holes without advantage, Evans and Ouimet were forced to settle their argument on the last green, where Ouimet had a seven-foot, side-hill put left to bring about the decision.

It was no easy putt to make, but the ball sailed gently for the middle of the tin.

A few days ago Evans was called upon to face another rugged opponent in young Bobby Jones.

Once more it was all a matter of one putt. They were all square at the 34th hole. At the 35th Bobby was on in two with Chick trapped on his second.

After Chick had used his niblick and Bobby his putter for the third strokes, it was again a matter of one putt—a twenty-footer for Bobby. But this time Chick's putt dropped in and Bobby's remained outside. It has all happened before—and will happen again. After breaking two course records at Chattanooga and Memphis in two different championships, the Atlanta star was forced to fall out just at the moment fate seemed upon the verge of planting the olive wreath around his young brow. One of the hardest shots in golf is to hole a four-footer at a critical stage just after the other fellow has tapped one in from 12 to 15 feet away.

WATCH THEM AT INVERNESS

It will be just as well to keep your weather eyes forcused on these two stars—Evans and Jones—at Inverness in the open championship just ahead.

The pros are not making the mistake of holding either too lightly. They still remember that amateurs won the open in 1913, 1915 and 1916—three times out of the last five starts.

Hagen stopped the amateur rush in 1914 and 1919, but in 1914 he only stopped Evans by a stroke.

Jones and Evans are two of the greatest medal players in the game, amateur or professional. And both are at the top of their best stuff this season. Jones had a 69 in the Southern at Chattanooga, breaking the amateur and professional record.

At Memphis, in the Western, his medal play was even more remarkable. The professional record for the course was 70. Yet Jones, in his two medal rounds turned in a 69 and 70 for 139 through 36 holes.

Not even a Vardon, a Ray or a Barnes would care to shoot against the mark on a bet.

Evans has been moving at the same speed. In a 72-hole try-out at the National, one of the hardest courses in the world, Evans recently turned in 297, an average of 74¼ strokes for each 18-hole tour.

When they met at Memphis in the 36-hole grapple, Evans had 148 for the two rounds and Jones had 149.

These scores are composed of championship speed. They are full proof that the two great amateurs will be among the leaders—and each will have a first-class chance to win.

Vardon and Ray ran into remarkable golf from Ouimet in 1913 at Brookline, and they are sure to encounter more amateur fireworks at Inverness.

They have had no serious amateur competition to face in Great Britain since Ball and Hilton passed the crest of the hill, but the situation is different over here.

Just how many other amateurs will compete at Toledo is not yet a matter of official record. If Ouimet enters the trio will be extremely formidable, as the Bostonian is another likely to raise the well known dickens with par at almost any moment.

GREATEST CHAMPIONSHIP

The greatness of any championship is based upon the number of fine players who compete.

Upon that basis this next open championship at Toledo will be easily the greatest ever held upon the Western Continent.

In 1913 at Brookline Vardon and Ray were over but McDermott was slipping; Hagen and Barnes were mere debutantes; Jones was only eleven years old. The 1920 field will bring out a remarkable class. Great Britian will have such entries as Vardon, Ray, Ayton and Mayo; the homebreds will have Hagen, Brady, Deige and others of top rank; the foreign born will include such stars as Barnes, Hutchinson, etc. Evans and Jones, and possibly Ouimet and others, will round out an amateur list of merit.

The class of the big field will undoubtedly be above the class of any field that has left the first tee upon its long march around the 72-hole test.

THE SWIFT PACE

Chick Evans has always maintained that for some reason or another he is always called upon in a championship, to tackle a terrific rival pace.

In 1912 at Chicago Travers was 2 under 4's for the afternoon round. In 1915 at Detroit Ned Sawyer handed him a 75 and a 73 over the 6,700-yard course.

In 1919 at Oakmont Ouimet had a 73 in the morning and reached the 9th hole in the afternoon with a 34, in spite of a six that followed two fine shots.

In the Western, against Bobby Jones, he had to beat a 73 to win by one hole.

In his last attempt in the British amateur Chick was out in 36 only to find himself 4 down against McFarlane's 31.

It would not be surprising to see both Evans and Jones under 300 at Inverness, and one of them is fairly sure to reach this result unless some cog in their golfing machinery happens to slip between now and the date of the match.

Appreciative

A young lawyer had a foreign client in police court the other day. It looked rather black for the foreigner and the youthful attorney fairly outdid himself in trying to convince the magistrate that his client was innocent of the charge brought.

The attorney dwelt on the other's ignorance of American customs, his straightforward story, and upon other details sufficient to extend the talk fully fifteen minutes. His client was acquitted.

In congratulating the freed man the lawyer held out his hand in an absent but rather suggestive manner. The client grasped it firmly.

"Eet was verra fine noise you mak'," he said. "Mocha thanks, Goo'by."

PING BODIE GIVES VOICE TO BABE RUTH'S INTERVIEW AS PREMIER SWATSMAN GRUNTS

Make Ball Call For Police When He Hits It, Is Veteran's Description Of Famous Bat Magician

BY PROSPER BURANELLI

Babe Ruth sloughed to the plate amid cheers, brandished his big bat anticipatively, and drove the first of Dauss's pretty cross-fire balls into the upper grand stand. A great uproar! The ball traveled at a small angle above horizontal, and had not begun to drop when the grand stand stopped it. That shows how things are against the Babe. There is always some obstruction getting in the way of his drives, and depriving them of the full majesty of distance. They ought to design double-sized ball parks for that colossal hitter.

You may detest baseball. You may not know that after first base comes second base. You may not know that the proper name for the pitcher is hurler, heaver, moundsman, etc. Yet you will feel an exaltation to see Babe Ruth put his bat squarely on the ball. It is an overpowering feat of primordial might. In this lies the magic by which the champion home run hitter has caught the popular imagination.

After the laughing Babe had trotted home, and while Dauss was cross-firing across the plate for a couple of outs, I hailed the hero of the day, and we sat in the press box and talked for two minutes or three. Or rather, the Babe didn't talk at all.

He is a huge, big fellow, this assassin of baseballs, not the thin middled, great chested ideal of an athlete, but thick bodied in every particular, like a cylinder of considerable diameter. He hunched himself onto a seat accommodatingly.

"Fine wallop," I remarked.

The Babe grinned and grunted. He grins often and laughs often. You sense a streak of the sardonic in his mirth. At least there is grimness in his laughter after he has hit one of his famous home runs. He grunts often, especially when taking a swing at the ball, grunts deeply and earnestly. His speaking voice is deep and earnest, a rumbling, hollow bass voice, what you would call a black voice if he were a singer.

"What have you got to say?" I asked.

The Babe looked serious. There is something somber, brooding, sullen in him when he is serious. His face is the kind you often find in fighting men; dark skin, small brown eyes with lids half covering them, hair jet black and of coarse texture, wide nose, high cheekbones, hair-line down low, small round chin.

Jack Dempsey is something like that, and I have seen several college football stars who were of the same swarthy, flat-featured type. These people suggest pictures that one might form of certain warrior heroes of the times of the Sagas, heroes who came from the mating of squat, swarth women of the Lap strain with tall, hulking, yellow-headed Norsemen. Sons of the Walhalla gods by the women of the gnomes!

Babe Ruth is a modification of this well recognised type. In college he would have been a great line bucker. In baseball he uses his tremendous brawn to make the ball go far.

He had nothing to say. His mouth is tied up by a contract. He was dumb. He could not even sing his own praises. Ping Bodie did that for him.

The irrepressible Ping passed and shouted his accustomed drolleries.

"Babe," he averred, "you hit that ball so hard that the guy in the grand stand who got it thought it was a buckwheat cake and tried to eat it. He's up there choking now.

"And let me tell you, young fellow," he addressed me, "that the Babe makes the ball call for the police when he hits it. Somebody says a guy says he'd raise the earth if they'd give him a step off. He must be a strong guy. But listen, if they'd give the Babe a step off the earth, he'd knock the old globe into the bleachers out there near Mars."

The Babe grinned all over his face. He is immensely elated with his glory. To him the world consists of the diamond plus left field, right and center, and the measurement of men as they stand at the plate is the world's standard of measurement. He is like the true type of chesty kid, immensely delighted with himself and the world, and immensely amiable.

The umpire called the last out for the inning, and the Yankees trotted out on the field. Mogridge began lefthanding his deep curves to the first Detroit hatter up. A crack, and the ball sailed high over right field. The Babe made a pretty running catch and again received the plaudits of the crowd. The batter who was out slunk ignominiously and unapplauded to the visitors' dugout. He was Ty Cobb.

He had gone to bat without a shout or handclap of the thunder he has grown accustomed to during his long career. He retired without even the booing that an enemy hero receives when he fails. At the Polo Grounds the once-mighty Ty Cobb is dead—long live Babe Ruth.

London Book Talk

BY JOHN O' LONDON

When recently pleading the necessity for the establishment of an American bookshop in London I hinted that we should value it not only for its own sake but as a stimulus to the British book trade. Our own bookselling system has long been deplorably patchy, slow and inadequate. In a great part of London and in hundreds of provincial towns the very possibility of buying books though, of course, it exists, is hidden. People are not exposed to the temptation to buy them. The voices which everywhere else megaphone "Buy! buy!" are silent in the literary field. Even in great centers like Manchester, Birmingham and Liverpool, there is little or no trade effort to stimulate and widen the book-buying habit. An immense number of British middle-class people think of a bookshop in connection with Bibles, Prayer Books, school prizes, Christmas gift books, inkstands, photograph frames, fire screens and elegant stationery; and they enter a bookshop with the shyness and self-protective caution with which they would enter an unaccustomed church or chapel.

All this cautiousness is being felt more and more in the after-war revival of intellectual curiosity and in presence of the new impetus which has been given to self-education.

But there are signs of awakening. A cleverly edited bookselling journal entitled "The Book-Post" has just inaugurated its career by putting the question "Is Bookselling in Need of Reform?" and by obtaining replies to it from a number of distinguished writers.

The great majority think that drastic reform is overdue. Mr. Bernard Shaw, indeed, declares sharply that "Bookselling in this country is in need, not of reform but of creation. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that there are no bookshops in England, so vast are the thickly populated areas of which the statement is literally true. I lived for many years in a London division containing a quarter of a million inhabitants, and not a single bookshop, although there was a shop at which you could buy nautical instruments—presumable for navigating the Regent's Canal."

Mr. J. D. Beresford, whose "psychological" fiction is now so much talked about, thinks that average English bookselling is "essentially inexpert."

Mrs. Flora Annie Steel, author of nearly a score of fine novels says that in half the bookshops she knows the service is in the hands of "flappers" who themselves read nothing but novels.

Miss M. P. Willcocks, author of that remarkable book, "Towards New Horizons," says: "A grocer usually does understand groceries, but the booksellers who know anything of books are as rare as 'white blackbirds.'"

Mr. Joseph Conrad thinks that "nothing but a shot-gun will reform the modern bookseller."

So the chorus continues, unvaried except by two voices. Mr. Stephen Graham seems to have had some fortunate encounters with country booksellers who find time to read the books they sell. Mr. Caradoc Evans, the author of those strange and ruthless pictures of Welsh village life in "My People" and "Capel Sion," surprises by his blunt statement that the folk who are in need of reform are "those who think that the show places of a bookseller's shop ought to be given over to highbrow, unsalable stuff." He throws the responsibility back on the author and publisher who, he thinks, ought to change the nature of the public demand. But Mr. John Galsworthy is right, I think, in his view that booksellers, publishers and authors dwell too much in separate camps, and that a new spirit of co-operation is needed, while Miss May Sinclair pertinently says that a bookseller's counter is just the place where the public seeks not only what it wants, but to be told what it wants. As it is, the book-inclined public is not only unable to buy books with any ease or convenience, but its mere inquiry for them is often a hopeless business.

Who will be the first publisher to have the courage to publish books in paper covers? It would seem to be an economy worth trying. At any rate, so long as the paper crisis lasts, but I do not yet hear of any firm that is disposed to take the plunge. "I doubt very much whether the public would buy them," said the head of one house to me. "They are so used to the stiff cover and the colored 'jacket' that they would think they were not getting their money's worth. Because the French buy them it does not follow that the English will. The publics are very different. I don't think that it was ever the custom to bind books in stiff covers in France on the same scale as we do."

All the same, I think that the book-loving public—the genuine book-loving public—would be prepared to put up with all manner of economical devices rather than that the output of good literature should be restricted by high prices and the prohibitive cost of production. If uncut pages, for instance, would help to bring down the costs, then let us have uncut pages, and let us cut them ourselves. It is not so very many years ago that one thought nothing of using a paper-knife for books, and periodicals too. And as for the stiff covers, well, there is such a thing as home-made binding—a very pleasant hobby.

That literature would benefit considerably if we economised is shown by a correspondent in The London Times Literary Supplement, who points out that in the devastated regions of France in improvised bookshops there are sold a series of little books prettily called "Une Heure d'Oubli," sold at 45 centimes each, the equivalent of a little more than 3d. (with postage), and including original works of sixty or more pages of clear print by Paul Bourget, Claude Farrère, Marcel Prevost, Alfred Capus, Henri Barbusse and other distinguished contemporary writers. There is also a series called the "Editions de la Connaissance" printed on fine paper and published at a price which, allowing for the rate of exchange, would make the mouths of the English book buyers water. The paper problem is more acute in France than it is here, but French literature is not going to suffer so long as there are type and paper of some sort.

Mr. Edmund Gosse has been drawing attention to what has become a deficiency rather common to new publications. In a review of Mr. Augustine Birrell's book "Frederick Locker-Lampson," he says "there is no index to a book which pre-eminently needs one, and for this monstrous omission the publishers ought to be led out and shot." There is nothing more annoying than to find a biography or any important works without an index. But here, again, I suppose we shall be told that we are up against our constant companion "prohibitive costs," that indexers expect to be paid at a rate corresponding to the rise in the pay of other occupations and that indexers also require paper. But here the remedy is to take the cost and paper of the index out of the book itself. A book of any importance without an index is a cripple from its birth.

A volume of worldwide interest that came into my hands the other day had half the index only, and I am afraid that no index is better than a half one. There had been some careless binding, and the whole edition may have gone out minus the one half or the other. Another book, printed in the United States by the way, came not only without the index but with fifty of the pages duplicated. A few pages were triplicated and apparently stuck in just anywhere. This was a large and important biography.

A MAKER OF SAINTS

A Maker Of Saints. By Hamilton Drummond. E. P. Dutton and Co.

The intelligent, turbulent, colorful Italy of the Middle Ages, where the artist was held in high esteem, where the great nobleman lived in blood-stained luxury and the peasant in blood-stained fear, is the scene of Hamilton Drummond's new and very interesting romance, "A Maker of Saints." That was the name the people of Forli gave to Marco Fieravanti, the sculptor, who was the pride of the town, and whom they dearly loved. Peasant-born, Marco Fieravanti was a great artist, whose fame had spread all over Italy, so that he was a welcome guest in the palaces both of prince and prelate, despite his humble origin. Yet of those who bade him smiling welcome few forgot that origin, and a barrier existed between Fieravanti and those with whom he apparently mingled so freely.

Besides being a famous sculptor, Marco Fieravanti also knew much about the art of planning strong defenses for town and castle, and it was upon a mission of this kind that its Duke summoned him to Arzano. From Forli to Arzano was a journey of several days, and his friend Luca Melone, the Bishop of Forli, advised him to go by way of Brettinoro, and there claim "The Custom." For at Brettinoro there was no inn, but in the center of one street was a stone pillar, to which whosoever would affixed a metal ring. "Picking a ring at hazard, the traveler made his choice, knocked on the stone, and knocking opened a door of welcome." The door might lead to butterless bread and a straw pallet, or to a Prince's supper and a luxurious lodging. But when after several adventures by the way Marco Fieravanti arrived at Brettinoro, it was not chance but the Bishop's advice which led him to choose one particular ring—the ring which opened the door of the Casa Faldora, the home of Ascanio Faldora of Pesara, a very gallant gentleman, last of a noble line. And there in the great house of the Faldoras he found romance and adventure, hate and death and treachery and love.

Dante himself appears in the course of the narrative, making a brief, but, in its effects, very important visit to the stronghold of Faldora. Lippo, the hideously cruel brigand, whose very name was enough to terrify the peasants, and Anthony Hawk, the courageous Englishman who was Fieravanti's pupil and loved him with a splendid, self-sacrificing love, are two of the most important characters in the tale, while the way in which Hawk took and used his "fighting chance" for life is a thrilling episode in a stirring narrative. The story is well told, with abundance of incident, a vivid picture of a time when "violence and sudden death were the commonplace of life," and, of course, a love interest centering around the proud and beautiful Lucia Faldora.

ROAD TO ENDOR

The Road To Endor. By E. H. Jones. Illustrated from photographs by C. W. Hill. New York: John Lane Company. $2.

This book, which will be of interest to every one interested in spiritualism, reads like a grossly improbable romance, yet the narrative is declared to be authentic and backed up by official documents and the corroborative testimony of eyewitnesses. It is an account of the manner in which two young British officers—prisoners in the hands of the Turks in a punishment camp at Yozgad, in the heart of Anatolia, Turkey, who previously knew nothing of the subject, but took it up originally to amuse their fellow-prisoners; how they afterward convinced not only the Turkish officers of their mediumistic powers but even their fellow-officers; how eventually the "spook" ran the camp, securing many privileges for the inmates, and in the end nearly effected the escape of the two mediums and came within an ace of kidnapping the Turkish commandant and interpreter. Later the two officers feigned insanity—Hill, melancholia; Jones, fixed dulusion—so effectively that they were compassionately sent home to England and had difficulty in convincing the British authorities of their sanity. The author asserts that the Turkish Governor was actually court-martialed for taking part in the treasure hunt instituted by the "spook"; and that since the armistice the authors have received letters from Turkish officials urging them to return and continue the search for the hidden treasure. Lieutenant Jones refers to the million souls just "gone over" in the full flush of manhood—abundant material for the psychic harvest of years to come. He pays his respects to Sir Oliver Lodge and "Raymond" in no uncertain terms.

I have seen men die from bullets and shell and poison; from starvation, from thirst, from exhaustion and from many diseases. God knows I have feared death. Yet death has ever had for me one strong consolation—it brings the "peace that passeth understanding." Like me, perhaps, you have watched it come to your friends and lay its quiet fingers on their gray faces. You have seen the relaxation from suffering, the gentle passing away and then the ineffable peace. And is my peace, when it comes, to be marred by this task of shifting tables and chairs and glasses, Sir Oliver? Am I to be at the beck and call of some hysterical, guinea-grabbing medium—a sort of telephone boy in Heaven or hell? I hope not, Sir, I trust there is nobler work beyond the bar for us poor mortals.

The book abounds in excellent and vigorous writing. The author leaves no doubt as to how he stands on the subject of spiritualism. It is a timely publication.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

Fletcher's Castoria is particularly a preparation for Infants and Children made agreeable to the taste, acceptable to the stomach and pleasant in its action. It has been in use for over thirty years and has always been one of the most highly esteemed of all cathartic preparations. It has one great advantage over other preparations of its kind in that while it opens the organs readily and completely, it does not have a tendency to produce subsequent constipation so much to be dreaded.

It was only after years of research in the fields of herbs and roots for a combination of purely vegetable matter that would have all the virtues of Castor Oil, without its disagreeable, nauseating properties, especially when used for infants or children, that the formula used in Fletcher's Castoria was found, and which for over 30 years has proven its worth. Try it.

Save the Babies.

Infantry mortality is something frightful. We can hardly realise that of all the children born in civilised countries, twenty-two per cent., or nearly one quarter die before they reach one year, thirty-seven per cent., or more than one-third, before they are five, and one half before they are fifteen! We do not hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save many of these precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many of these infantile deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Drops, tinctures and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain more or less opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, deadly poisons. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to congestion, sickness, death. To avoid any possibility of giving your child opiates, or narcotics of any kind, keep Fletcher's Castoria in the house, and Save the Babies.

Health, Beauty And The Home

How Do You Wash?

By Mrs. Christine Frederick,
The Distinguished Authority on Household Efficiency.

PROBABLY if I asked any woman the one task most full of drudgery in the home she would say "washing dishes." But I am sure that she would put "washing clothes" as the next job entailing the most drudgery, being the most degrading and the one that she would like to put off on to a hired worker if she could.

I believe that this view is a remnant of the traditional idea of washing on a board. For centuries (ever since Eve washed her fig leaf on a flat stone) women have sought to get clothes clean by the friction method. They have seemed to feel that the more they rubbed the more easily dirt left the clothes. And so we have had an evolution of corrugated board and washers with a "milk stool" or boards based on this same rubbing principle.

Another old idea was that one has to do the work in a sloppy, steaming place, that a large quantity of boiling water is required, and that the whole process is unusually "hard" and accompanied by excessive heat and slop.

To-day, however, we are beginning to see an entire revolution in washing methods. We are learning that it is not the rub, but the strength of the soap solution used and the exact steps followed that bring good results. Probably one of the first of these totally different ideas is that it is not necessary to soak clothes over night. A soaking of three or four hours will accomplish all that could be done in an overnight soak. In other words, it is possible to remove soil from clothing without having the extra labor of soaking, squeezing out the dirty water and the extra handling that this involved.

The second revolutionary idea is that to get clothes clean we do not need boiling water. On the contrary, boiling water sets the dirt, and it is much better to wash in tepid water and then rinse or scald in boiling water, which thus acts as a bleach. Many women may not believe this, but it has been proved by test and experiment. It is possible to wash dirt out by using only tepid water if the soap solution is strong enough and if the clothes are later given a scald-bleach.

What is a soap solution? Again the old idea used to be that rubbing with a cake of soap on the garment removed the soil. That is, a friction method was employed. But it has been shown that the efficiency of soap is far greater if the soap is shaved and completely dissolved in water and this solution used in place of cake soap. The reason is quite apparent—all the substances of which the soap is composed are let loose in the water and are thus more active and powerful than when applied in solid form.

It is very easy for any woman to make a soap solution by shaving any good laundry or white soap into about two quarts of water, bringing to the boil and using in this form. To such a solution the desired amount of washing soda, borax or other cleansing agent may be added.

With these revolutionary ideas in mind—namely, no need for long overnight soaking, no need to wash in boiling water and the use of a solution instead of bar soap—washing at once becomes robbed of most of its terrors.

As I have perhaps said before, the three pieces of equipment which every modern home should possess are a washing machine, a vacuum cleaner and a fireless cooker. Probably of all these the washing machine removes the largest amount of drudgery.

As is so well stated in many advertisements, it is possible to have a batch of clothes washing in the machine while the housewife is eating breakfast or doing some other work. At most it requires but three loads to complete the usual family wash. If a swinging or other automatic wringer is used this also removes much of the manual drudgery of wringing by hand or the effort of turning a hand roll wringer.

A short soaking in a soap solution may precede washing in a machine. However, the clothes should be soaked in the machine, as this will save handling from a tub back again. But soaked clothes lessen the strength of the soap solution used for washing, and hence it is preferable not to soak at all, but to drop the clothes quickly into tepid soapsuds and begin washing.

I wonder how many housekeepers know "powdered soap?" This is regular soap pulverized at the factory. It is not in any sense a washing powder, but owing to its being so finely pulverized it is far more effective than the usual bar soap. It can be bought in large packages.

This season delicate crepes and muslins are much used for Summer dresses. They require the most care in laundering. It is a mistake to suppose, however, that all of these dresses need to be dry cleaned at a high cost. By the use of various powdered soaps or flakes of guaranteed purity even such delicate fabrics can be washed safely by the amateur.

There is also a fine art of pressing which every housekeeper can follow if she will. Many a time a dress seems dirty when really it is only mussed, and a pressing will entirely revive it. The use of whiting or French chalk, borax, cornstarch and other dry cleaners may be followed to great advantage with such delicate fabrics.

Making Hair Grow

By Lina Cavalieri,
The Most Famous Living Beauty.

WHEN I find I am not looking so well as usual I study myself carefully in the mirror, seeking for the defect that has somehow marred my appearance.

Then it is that I note my hair is not arranged so prettily nor so becomingly as usual. It does not respond readily to the brush; it lies lifeless under my fingers, and instead of being a live, fluffy, glowing mass it has diminished to a wisp scarcely larger than my two fingers. It is as though some witch in a rage had plucked it, hair by hair, from my head as I slept.

But that has happened too often to give me alarm. Once I wept over it. I thought I was to become as the shiny-headed men that sit in the first rows of the opera and stare at the shapely legs of the chorus girls. But that was long ago. Now I know when my hair shows these symptoms that it is dead, but only temporarily, and that with care I can resurrect and make it live again.

With this lifeless condition of the hair I have always found two corresponding conditions of the scalp. The scalp is hot and dry. Also, the brushing reveals dandruff—light, fine and profuse. It is a condition that must be corrected.

First remove the dandruff. Hair cannot grow well when that fine, light powder lies upon the scalp, obstructing its pores. To rid one's self of it the hair must be washed not once but often.

I resolve upon washing it every day for a week. I choose the time when I have had my bath. In the water I have dissolved a cake of the best soap I can get. If it is pure castile all the better. I part my hair, dipping a small brush the size of an ordinary toothbrush into the water, and rub the parting vigorously. I part it again and rub that parting, and the next, scrubbing it strenuously with the brush dipped frequently into the soapy water.

When this has been done I empty the bowl, and in a second water, in which the other half of the cake of soap is dissolved, I wash my hair again, but this time rub the scalp not with the brush, but with the fingers. Then I rinse it again and again until the water is as clean as when it runs from the faucet.

Now comes the problem of drying it. The hair that is dried in the hot funnel becomes brittle and cracks. If it is dried by draughts of cold air its owner contracts neuralgia. It should be dried first by a brisk toweling. The towel should be rubbed quickly through the hair and upon the scalp, taking the first dripping stage of moisture from each of them.

The remainder of the drying should be done in the open air if possible. If not, use the heat of the hands. With the tips of the fingers every bit of space on the scalp should be rubbed until dry.

As the scalp dries the hair dries, too. Finally, that the hair may not hang together in matted strands, but stand fluffily, each hair for itself, there should be the last stage of the drying. This is the rubbing of the hair, strand by strand, between the hands. Even one single shampoo, done in this fashion, will prove that the hair that seemed to be dead is, after all, very much alive.

After the drying the hair should, of course, be brushed—adequately brushed. But there are curious ideas among some women as to what is adequate brushing. Some friends of mine give the hair one hundred—even two hundred—strokes. I think this is too many.

Excessive brushing drags upon the hair and loosens its roots. Forty or fifty strokes of the brush I believe to be quite enough. Less brushing, more massaging, is what is needed by most heads, especially the heads on which the hair is thinning.

When you have finished brushing the hair there should be massage—dry massage preferably. If you begin with dry fingers, as you should, you will find that your fingers soon become oily. The sebaceous glands yield their contents quickly to the pressure of fingers and the released oil softens the hair and sets the tide of growth pouring into it.

PARK UNION HOLDS OPENING

Throng Attends Reception In Banks New Quarters On Kiukiang Road

Mr. F. V. Reilly, General Manager of the Shanghai branch of the Park Union Foreign Banking Corporation, and members of the staff of the institution gave greetings yesterday to a throng of business men and others who attended the opening of the bank's new quarters at 7 Kiukiang Road, at the corner of Szechuen. The reception that was held continued through the hours from 11 in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

The Park-Union is one of the newer financial institutions in Shanghai having been established here last fall after the first branch of the corporation to open in the Far East was established at Yokohama. A third branch was later opened at Tokio and Mr. T. F. Aspden, of New York, Vice President of the corporation who is now the Orient, said recently that definite plans are afoot greatly to extend the scope of the corporation's activities. In line with this purpose branches shortly are to be opened at Peking, Tientsin and Hankow and probably later at Hongkong and Manila.

The institution was launched by the National Park Bank of New York and the Union Bank of Canada and is being operated under provisions of the American Federal Reserve Act.

Up to the present time the Shanghai branch of the bank has been located in temporary quarters at No. 1 Kiukiang Road.

Japanese Organise Society For League

Tokio, August 25.—A Japan Society of the League of Nations has been organised here with Baron Shibusawa as president of the Society and Baron Sakatani vice-president.

The society aims at the realisation of the spirit underlying the League of Nations and for this purpose will undertake the following:

Investigation of subjects relative to the League of Nations.

Establishment of connection between Japanese and foreign public bodies organised with similar objects.

Despatch of Japanese delegates to all kinds of international conventions to be held abroad.

Buenos Aires Will Have "Yank" Club

Buenos Aires, August 15.—The American Club here of nearly 300 members is trying to lease or buy a home in order to fulfil a long felt want for an American social center in the Argentine capital. There are a number of English clubs to which some Americans belong, but there is no place where Americans can get together and "talk freely" as one of the promoters put it.

The Board of Governors point out that if it is to be a real American Club it must be "the best," which means a good deal in this city of fashionable clubs, among them a luxurious German club. The organisation has a "nest egg" of $20,000 to begin with.

It is proposed to admit women to privileges and make the club a center of all American patriotic activities. The American Club at present holds a weekly luncheon at a hotel when the members listen to addresses by prominent visitors or Argentines.

English Explorers To Climb Everest

Geneva, August 25.—Colonel Charles Bruce and Major Rawlin of the English Geographical Society will shortly start on an expedition to attempt to climb to the peak of Mount Everest, Himalayas, according to an announcement received here from Zermatt. The adventurers will be accompanied by Swiss guides and porters in their attempt to conquer the highest mountain peak on the globe.

Poland Schools To Receive Large Sum

Warsaw, August 20.—Poland is contemplating expenditure of 300,000,000 marks for new school buildings and the improvement of her school system generally. Before the war, under Russian rule it is estimated that only about one-sixth of the children of Poland attended the schools where Russian was taught exclusively. Since Poland became a republic it is figured that the school attendance has increased until at least half the children are now attending institutions of learning of some kind.

Prisoners Of War Are Being Sent Home

Paris, August 22.—The last prisoners of war in French hands being remnants of the Russian expeditionary force that landed at Marseilles, acclaimed by enthusiastic throngs, in 1917, are being expatriated as fast as the slow progress of negotiations with the Bolsheviki will allow.

About 5,000 of them remained interned after all other prisoners, including the Germans, had been sent home. Coming as allies and participating in some of the fierce fighting along the Aisne, the Russians were deeply impressed by the revolution in their country; discipline suffered until finally revolt and mutiny broke out in the ranks, requiring severe measures.

The contingent never again participated in military operations. The men were used for a time in road repairing but the results were unsatisfactory. They are being exchanged for French soldiers taken by the Soviet forces on the Archangel front.

Hard Times Are Aid To Cupid In Japan

Tokio, August 28.—Japanese find a close connection between money and marriage by reading the lessons of the existing financial depression in Japan.

The passing of easy money-making has caused a rush to the Japanese matrimonial agencies and women are leading in the rush. In prosperous times the agency customers are men looking for wives, but now, say matrimonial managers, the old order is reversed. In view of the approaching "hard times" women are apparently seeking safety in the protection of husbands.

One result of the feminine advances is a marked increase in marriages.

French Flyer Is To Try For 12,000 Meters

Paris, August 24.—Jean Casale, who established a new airplane flight for height record June 14, 1919, when he mounted 9,520 meters (of 39.37 inches) has satisfied himself by a laboratory test that he may safely attempt to reach his announced goal of 12,000 meters, or seven and a fifth miles.

Casale spent more than an hour in a hermetically sealed cabinet equipped with air-density and other scientific instruments. Casale controlled the exhausting of the air and the admission of compressed oxygen through a form of gas mask.

The atmosphere was reduced to the equivalent of the pressure at the 12,000 meter height in 47 minutes 30 seconds and normal atmospheric pressure was restored in 20 minutes.

The aviator said he experienced cold and a sense of uneasiness. At one time he closed his eyes but found it accentuated his dizziness. During most of the experiment he kept his ears stopped.

Woman Disguised A Man For Many Years

London, August 25.—Dora Hansen, a German woman, who for 30 years successfully masqueraded as a man, has just died here. Her sex was discovered when she had a paralytic stroke two years ago. Under the name of Ferdinand Hansen she worked for many years in Leeds as a canvasser for a photographer.

A PRESENT FROM NATURE

Moreover, what is Nature? It is that from which all creation springs. When things lose this Principle they die: when they receive it they are born. If men, in acting, run counter to it, they fail, if they comply with it, they succeed. Wherefore drop your silly prejudices and turn to Nature. WEATHER

The southern typhoon has blown down all the lines of the Philippines. That of the Loochoos is probably passing between Naha and the Meiaco-Sima. It will raise a storm on the Eastern Sea, and threatens the coast between Shanghai and Foochow: more to the south, if the pressures rise in Shantung, more to the north, if they decrease. Squalls and showers may begin tomorrow at the mouth of the Yangtsze.

A Boomerang

A Correspondent writes to us as follows:

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir: Inclosed please find my vote for Mr. Harding. I believe that the election of the Republican Candidate would mean a return to reason in the Government of the United States.

I am a Republican but were I a Democrat I believe that I would cast my vote for the Republican Candidate. Mr. Cox stands on his record as a War Governor but his record prior to the entrance of the United States into the war is the one that we should examine very carefully. Mr. Cox is the Governor of a State that has a large number of what were known as German-Americans and in the last Presidential campaign the following appeared in Mr. Cox's paper:

> "We do not believe that all of our German friends or anything like a majority of them, have so lost their love for the Fatherland as to line up on the side of those who find fault because this Government did not go to war with Germany over the invasion of Belgium. We do not believe that they are so disloyal to their friends and relatives who are fighting for what they believe to be right as to give aid and comfort to the worst enemies of Germany in this country —namely, the RABID ROOSEVELT and his choice for President."

This same paper also prayed that "The next arm lifted to wield the sword (against Germany) should be paralysed."

Does America want a man of that type for President? I believe that the returns in November will be emphatic NO. Very sincerely yours,

A REPUBLICAN VOTER.

Shanghai, Aug. 31, 1920.

Our correspondent probably clipped the quotation he uses in the above from The Sun and New York Herald. That newspaper, which is supporting Harding, printed it shortly after the nomination of Gov. Cox along with a lot of other quotations which were issued by the Ohio State Republican Committee in the 1918 campaign in an effort to defeat Cox for the governorship.

The charges fell flat both in 1918 and in 1920 because they were absolutely baseless. In fact the republishing of them early in July had a result that was boomerangic for it focussed public attention on the career of Gov. Cox and gave the Democrats a chance to show, at just the right time, what a magnificent war record Cox really had.

The editorial paragraph in question was written in 1916 when Roosevelt was supporting Hughes and Cox was supporting Wilson. George F. Burba an editorial writer on one of Cox's string of newspapers was the author of it. As a matter of record, Cox's position was so clear that the German-American Democrats of Ohio voted against him almost to a man. The record of all the counties in which there was a heavy German-American vote amply proves this.

The italics and the capitalised words are our correspondent's who thus seeks to emphasise his own interpretation. But our correspondent has gone one step too far. In the sentence "The next arm lifted to wield the sword should be paralyzed" he has inserted the words "against Germany" thus giving a completely false impression of an article that was written in denunciation of war in general. If Harding's friends are reduced to such extremity, Harding's case must be weak.

BETTER HOMES CAMPAIGN

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Dear Sir: Much interest has been aroused by the correspondence in your paper on the subject of Homemaking; and I was very glad to see the articles the other day on the work being done and planned by the Shanghai Baptist College and Miss Jones' School in Huchow. As further evidence of a practical interest in this subject and as a hopeful sign for progress in the future I think your readers and correspondents might be interested in the following report of the formation of a "Better Homes Campaign" Committee in Shanghai and of its plans for work.

There is a committee, formed last March, of women of whom fifteen are Chinese and eight are foreign, representing twenty-two different societies or groups. There is a Chinese chairman and a Chinese secretary, a foreign vice-chairman and a foreign secretary. At present its main activity is an enquiry into home conditions in Shanghai by means of a questionnaire which is being used in the component groups. While, owing to the novelty of the idea in China and the consequent prejudice it has to work against, and also to the lack of an adequate number of trained workers, we cannot expect any very far-reaching or accurate result from this questionnaire, we still hope to get some useful data from which to work in our campaign and also that we make break ground and provide a basis for a more thorough investigation in the future.

In adition to this we are hoping to conduct a study into the question of Housing, of Home Finances, of Recreation in the Home, and of Women and Children's Clothing, which will materialise in practical suggestions.

The above plans we hope will all be started and in working order by October, and then at the beginning of December we are planning a ten-days Institute, when for three hours each afternoon we shall hold a series of classes, lectures, exhibits, etc, on different phases of home life. One hour each day will be devoted to Hygiene in the Home, when there will be alternative classes on such subjects as "The Care of the Mother and Baby," "The Care of Invalids" "The Kitchen and the Care and Preparation of Food," "Home Hygiene." Another hour each day questions of Home Life will be taken up when talks will be given on such subjects as "Home Decoration" "Home Recreation." The third hour each day will be used for the discussion of "Home Relationships," the talks being on such subjects as "Marriage and Betrothal," "Relationship of Husband and Wife," "Parents and Children," "The Servant in the Home."

Our subject is of course too comprehensive to be studied at all thoroughly in ten days, but our hope is to get together the best thinking on the subject and to have a thoughtful constructive study of its various phases, from which we can go on with more intelligent and practical plans for improvement and advance. Every effort will be made to keep the classes and lectures practical and to apply every theory to the conditions and possibilities of the average Chinese household; and as far as possible each point will be illustrated by practical demonstration, by exhibits, and by pictures, so that the impression may be more vivid and lasting.

We hope to have an attendance of from eighty to a hundred women at this Institute; and from this we hope to get an impetus for a campaign of education and reform back into the constituent societies and into the various girls' schools, the churches, and all other groups where women have a conscious group life.

These are our plans so far—they are big and ambitious, their results may be far-reaching and exceed all our hopes; or the whole thing may fizzle out. This will depend upon how much we can get the sympathy, interest, and practical help of the community, and especially of all thoughtful progressive Chinese women, behind us.

This question of Home-making is essentially a women's problem, and until we women unite in thinking into it and tackling it, it cannot be solved. We know that we have men's interest in our efforts, and that in the main they will back us in our attempts to solve it, and that they have got to play their part in its solution; but —they are helpless without us.

In the different phases of our campaign we shall have to rely mainly on voluntary help of all kinds and we shall be very glad to receive and try to utilise all offers of help that may be forthcoming, and also any suggestions as to methods and means, for our plans are by no means crystallised.

The correspondence in your paper is only one more evidence among many of widespread interest in this subject and we should be glad to get in touch with your correspondents and any others who are interested.

I enclose a list of the members of our committee and the societies they represent.

Thanking you for allowing us so much of your valuable space, Sincerely yours,,

MALE FLIRTS

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Dear Sir: Please let me thank "A Victim" for expressing herself on a subject which has kept me indignant ever since the weather has been nice enough to sit in and enjoy (?) the Public Gardens.

Why is it that it seems to be impossible for a woman to go there alone without men thinking they have a right to stare at her or speak to her or otherwise insult her? I'm sure it's not that they make a justifiable mistake in my case because a woman who wants to be spoken to will, I think, soon let them know; but I go there to be alone and get a little quiet and peace and rest, and I don't dress conspicuously or try to attract attention in any way.

The antics and manners of the men I speak of are so disgusting and insulting and cowardly; one first tries to discourage them by one's attitude and then by word (and preferably by a horse whip if one could); and they finally leave one in a state of boiling indignation and longing for a foreign policeman to fly to for protection. The grey-haired man she speaks of is, I daresay, a well-known pest to every woman who goes to the Gardens alone; and, if it's the one I mean, he's got a perfectly good wife at home. I wish I knew "A Victim" and we could compare notes and perhaps round up a few of the rotters and see that they get a dancing in Soochow Creek, or cool off their ardor in some other way.

But, really, can't something be done about it?

"ALSO A VICTIM."

CAMERAITIS

Cameras are evil influences—like railway time tables. After exhaustive research work it has been found that the recent renaissance of words not found in the dictionary is due, in large measure, to the introduction of the camera. If anyone should doubt this I would refer him to any individual who has taken two photographs of his best beloved on one plate.

To get good results one must be born under a lucky planet or in the words of the ancients "Nascitur non fit," which being interpreted means, "A snap shot is better than time exposure in Sing Sing."

It is essential that the camera should be pointed at the subject and that the sun should be behind the snapshotter. If the sun is not visible take your bearings, divide by two and turn round three times.

It is not advisable to take photographs of becoming young ladies if the snapshotter should be an illusive bachelor. Cases have been known in which becoming, or coming on young ladies, after such an incident, have taken the taker.

Thus is the thin line dividing golf from rabies indicated.

"Golf is a game of marbles played with clubs. Billiards gone to grass, tennis gone to seed, and played with clubs. It is a five mile walk punctuated with perplexing problems. Three acres and a ball! Humbly I'll make it all my task
To give you everything you ask:
A suit of rooms—a limousine—
Oh, stay with me and be my queen.

You needn't soap the children's faces

Cox The Governor As Revealed In Official Records

The budget question is to the fore, not only in many States but as a national issue and Governor Cox, in his message of Jan. 18, 1919, expressed his view of it as follows:

"The subject of governmental budgets has pressed itself into export and flay thought as well. For years the agitation has persisted in behalf of a Federal budget, and the consummation of a modern plan has been delayed, as most people believe, not because of any misgivings as to its efficiency and economy, but solely from the fact that Congressional committees vested with the powers of appropriating money have been unwilling to surrender them.

"In 1913 a budget system was adopted in this State; it has limitations in operation, but they are within the Constitution. So far as it has gone, it has helped to simplify the financial affairs of the States. It has resulted in great saving and it clearly indicates what might be accomplished if the results of painstaking investigation were the base of something more than tentative action.

"The head of a successful business enterprise prepares his budget for the year and it becomes the fixed base of expenditure. Now let us see what the rule is with the Federal and with most State Governments. The heads of departments prepare their estimates, predicated too often upon desire rather than necessity. The legislative body conducts a hearing most times without that knowledge which enables penetration into the facts. If you will pardon the personal observation, I served myself as a member of the Committee on Appropriations in Congress where hundreds of millions of dollars were appropriated blindly and inefficiently, and so it has gone throughout the years. Under the present system in Ohio, the Governor, through the Budget Commissioner, prepares a statement for the Assembly, which, by item and specification, shows just what the departments need for the approaching biennium. This estimate, as far as I know, has never been diminished by legislative investigation or enactment, but always added to."

PRISON REFORM

In demanding prison reform at the outset of his executive career, Governor Cox reminded the Assembly that it was "part of a contract made with the people," and added:

"The facts justify the statement that no subject has taken greater hold on public interest, in years, than that of prison reform. The best thought on the subject is opposed to the Ohio policy and every condition wrought through an appreciation of the human welfare phase of the problem makes our prison system stand out as an institution of the past, unchanged by either its tragedies or by a civilisation that has laid hold on every other human agency.

"Our whole system is a plain travesty on human intelligence. It is as much of an outrage to sentence a habitual criminal to three years in the penitentiary as it would be to consign a hopeless lunatic to an asylum for three years. It is as much a crime against society to release from prison gates a known criminal as it would be to turn loose a maniac. At the expiration of a prisoner's term some constituted authority should pass on the propriety and safety of turning him loose. No lesson will be more helpful to him than self-restraint, and liberty should be given only when it is earned and deserved."

As a result of this plea lands were bought for cultivation near the prison, whereon the convicts worked and thus contributed to the support of their dependents; and a Board of Clemency was established. Its two members had their office at the prison and were in actual contact with the men. "I wish I had the time," Govevrnor Cox said in his message of 1919, "to tell you what I know personally of many of these cases—of seemingly hopeless homes restored —of aimless lives turned into useful purpose, of untold mothers' hearts that have been filled with the pride and joy of their sons' redemption. I have seen foreigners ignorant of our language and our customs as wild almost behind prison doors as lynx from the woods, and little knowing why they were confined, remade by useful employment and attendance at night school and sent back into the world as no further menace to society. Gentleman, this beneficent work cannot be approached with pencil and pad to count the dollars and cents involved!"

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION

Governor Cox may almost be said to have fathered the compulsory compensation law, since the Ohio measure was regarded as the first successful effort in that direction. Of it he said in his first legislative message:

"It would certainly be common bad faith not to pass a compulsory workmen's compensation law. No subject was discussed during the last campaign with greater elaboration, and it must be stated to the credit of our citizenship generally that regardless of the differences of opinion existent for many years the justice of the compulsory feature is now admitted. Much of the criticism of the courts has been due to the trials of personal injury cases under the principles of practice which held the fellow-servant rule, the assumption of risk and contributory negligence, to be grounds of defense. The layman reaches his conclusion with respect to justice along the lines of common sense, and the practice in personal injury cases has been so sharply in conflict with the plain fundamentals of right that social unrest has been much contributed to.

"A second phase of this whole subject which has been noted in the development of the great industrialism of the day has been the inevitable animosity between capital and labor through the ceaseless litigation growing out of these cases. The individual or the corporation that employs on a large scale has taken insurance in liability companies, and in too many instances cases which admitted of little difference of opinion have been carried into the courts.

"The third injustice has been the waste occasioned by the system. The injured workman or the family deprived of its support by accident is not so circumstanced that the case can be contested with the corporation to the court of last resort. The need of funds compels compromise on a base that is not always equitable. Human nature many times drives sharp bargains that can hardly be indorsed by the moral scale. In the final analysis the cost of attorney fees is so heavy that the amount which finally accrues in cases of accident is seriously curtailed before it reaches the beneficiary.

"These three considerations clearly suggest the lifting of this whole operation out of the courts and the sphere of legal disputation."

The law was passed, and Governor Cox, reporting on its operation in December, 1914, nearly two years later, told the General Assembly:

"The human results of the workmen's compensation law have been so widespread and the wisdom of the people in changing the Constitution so as make this plan compulsory has been so completely demonstrated that the manufacturer and employe now join in praise of the act. While the liability insurance companies contended that the State could not administer this trust and that the cost would run into millions of dollars per year, the experience of the first twelve months shews the cost of administration to be approximately $160,000; and the claims running far in excess of 50 000 in number have been adjudicated with such promptness as to justify in the fullest measure the soundness of the State plan. The balance in the fund Dec. 15, 1914, was $2 418 414 67. The number of accidents is diminishing and the cost to the employer is decreasing; so that both lower rates and larger compensation seem asured."

One result of the operation of the law was so to reduce the volume of litigation that Ohio found it unnecessary to provide additional Judges, as had seemed imperative. A Federal Judge made a decision under the act in which circumstances usually regarded as constituting wanton neglect were held to constitute a "willful act." and Governor Cox promptly asked the Legislature to write a definition of that term into the law "so clearly that there can be no doubt in the mind of any court."

In his message to the Assembly in January, 1919, Governor Cox reported that the fund held by the State as trustee for injured workmen and their dependents amounted to $15.401.429.74, and that while the injured got larger compensation than in other States, employers paid a smaller premium than elsewhere. Then he recited an incident as illustrating the worker's attitude toward the law. "Not long since," he said, "a workman was injured in a factory through which runs the boundary line between Ohio and Pennsylvania. The accident occurred a few feet east of our State, but the poor fellow crawled back on to the soil of Ohio because he knew the difference between our law and the law in Pennsylvania.

"It is a more or less well-known fact that incorporated companies whose employes are assigned to interstate work cover as large a part of their payroll into the Ohio fund as they possibly can. It is thus demonstrated that the employer and employe both regard the Ohio plan as the best. During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1918, 157.000 claims for compensation were passed upon by the Industrial Commission. Nine hundred and ninety-four of these were based upon fatal accidents. In the period named there was awarded to the victims of industrial accidents and their dependents more than $10.000.000. In thousands of cases lump sums were allowed to purchase homes for widows and children or to establish suitable business for disabled workmen who were no longer fitted to support themselves in shop or mine."

W. K. Vanderbilt is dead, in Paris, where of late years his horses raced and his time and money were spent. The world reviews "a great American family."

The first generation, headed by Commodore Vanderbilt, started on the road to wealth from a small rowboat with a Vanderbilt at the oars, via great railroads with a Vanderbilt as president and stock manipulator.

The second generation, under William H., saw the Vanderbilts very rich and getting richer. It had great houses to which "nobody" came. It comforted itself with the knowledge that in Maud S. it had the world's greatest trotter, and in banks and stocks the world's greatest fortune.

With the third generation, that of the man just dead, the Vanderbilts came "into society." At last "somebody" came to the big houses. A footman sat beside the coachman when the carriage went out. Instead of a maid neatly dressed, a footman with powdered hair and silk covered calves opened the door.

In that third generation the Vanderbilt fortune was divided among eight children of William H. It could stand division. The two oldest sons, Cornelius and William K., got one hundred millions each at least; and others another hundred millions among them.

That so far is the Vanderbilt history. Power seemed to die away in the third generation. American racing, yachting, "society" became tiresome, once achieved. Vanderbilt went abroad, where racing and society are more thoroughly understood and organised.

The Vanderbilt fortune, once the greatest, is now one of the "comfortable" large fortune. All the Vanderbilts combined, including collateral branches, have perhaps one billion—not very much in our day.

The real money makers have come up since old Vanderbilt charged a few pennies for rowing you in his little boat from Staten Island to New York.

W. K. was the richest Vanderbilt. John D. Rockefeller could buy his total fortune every year with part of his annual income and have enough left to buy up the next richest Vanderbilt.

Henry Ford, in his machine shop, earns enough money to buy the richest Vanderbilt about once a year. Henry Ford was mending bicycles when William K. was deciding that Paris was the place for a "gentleman" to live and spend money.

The life of the dead man was perfectly respectable. He did only what he had the right to do. His money and time under our laws were his own, to be disposed of as he thought fit. Among the great kings of money history will place him, probably, among the rois faineants—idle kings that took little pleasure in power or the exercise of it.

He lived preferably in the background—disliked attention. One day at Monte Carlo, many years ago, having placed and won the highest bet allowed, twelve thousand francs, the croupier, thinking Mr. Vanderbilt had overlooked the bet, called out his name, a violation of gambling house etiquette. Thus pointed out to the crowd of gamblers, swindlers, idlers and parastites, Vanderbilt hurried away, leaving the twenty-four thousand francs to anybody that chose to take the money. Thereupon, James Gordon Bennett, less sensitive, said to the croupier, "The money is mine" (la mass est a moi), gathered up the bank notes and golden louis, found Vanderbilt in the crowd and gave the money to him.

The death of the chief Vanderbilt is interesting because it enables you to study the course of great wealth in this republic as it passes from generation to generation. You observe that it is not dangerous. It began in intense energy—useful building, transportation development, necessary to all of the country. It dwindled into quiet, colorless conservatism, perfectly willing to let alone in return for a quiet life, with a good valet, good cook, yacht, and good race horses.

Power controls men and governments. Money is power. Gigantic fortunes running to the billions might disturb the balance of democratic government. But from Mr. Vanderbilt you learn that the danger seems not immediate.

The man with qualities that accumulate a great fortune in our day appears to have little power or desire in other directions. "I lie and I possess; let me sleep," the words of the dragon Fafner seem to describe the American of the third and fourth generation who has inherited his share.

It has not been so always. With the Medicis of Italy, for instance, the world's greatest fortune meant many things. Besides valets and cooks it meant a Medici for Pope, ruling the world; a Medici for wife of Henry of Navarre, a Medici "the magnificent." It meant the victory of the Medici over the Republic of Florence. The Medici fortune meant encouragement and support to the greatest artists, not mere buying from a dealer the works of men dead centuries ago, but creating new men, new genius in the present. The Medicis ruled through centuries, the Vanderbilts fade in a day.

When you see a python gliding over rocks, head well up, movements swift, look out. That python is fasting, hungry. He is hunting and a menace to everybody.

But later, when you find him asleep in the sun, with a small deer or three or four monkeys inside of him, you need not worry. Activity and the menace have gone out of him.

So it appears to be with our hunters in the financial forest. They are quiet and harmless when they reach the stage of digesting that which has been accumulated. You need not worry about them then.

W. K. Vanderbilt was a well-behaved, courteous man, respecting his country's laws and the rights of the public, as he understood them. Without the course of a great inherited fortune that made effort seem foolish, he might have been like his grandfather, the ferryman—a constructive force in the country.

There is nothing but good to be said of him. And no man need envy him. For of all dull, sad lives, the dullest is spending what some one else has made.

Can You Make A Good Pie?

BY LORETTO C. LYNCH

(An Expert on All Matters Pertaining to Household Management.)

Can you make a cherry pie? Who is so old as not to appreciate a cherry pie? A very delightful Englishman who was traveling with his family on an American liner had been telling me why the complexions of his country women were quite superior to American complexions. He said they never drank ice water nor did they eat that abomination, pie. Now, he had never seen a really truly pie. And, as luck would have it, the first pie served him was a delicious cherry pie with flaky crust and oodles of juicy cherries.

It is sufficient to say that this gentleman—and he was a gentleman—and his daughters forgot absolutely about complexions and forever after became devotees of pie.

To make a pie from any of the fresh fruits or berries of Summer, it is necessary to know how to make a good pie crust. The making of puff paste, such as is made by the best French chefs, is beyond the ability and the purse of the average housewife. But any woman who follows directions can make a good, plain pie crust without much trouble or too great an expense.

Remember, however, that something worth while cannot be made out of nothing. And you must decide right in the beginning that you can afford to use the materials required to make a good pie crust, else you should not attempt to make it at all.

There is for sale at the market what is known as a pastry flour. I do not mean the prepared flours containing baking powder. I refer to a flour manufactured from a wheat that is planted in the Fall, stays in the ground all Winter and is harvested in the Spring.

This variety of wheat requires less moisture than the familiar bread flour. Butter gives a better flavor to piecrust than does other shortenings. But butter does not make so tender a piecrust as does lard or any of the delightful vegetable shortenings on the market.

To get both flavor and tenderness in pastry use half butter and half of some other shortening. To make enough pastry for two medium-sized pies, sift together one-half level teaspoonful of salt and two level measuring cups of flour (half pint size), and into this chop two-thirds of a measuring cup of shortening. Two knives may be used to chop in the shortening or a double-edged chopping knife may be used in a wooden bowl.

When the shortening is well chopped in, wet to a paste with ice water. Thoroughly chill in the refrigerator for at least fifteen minutes. Toss on a floured board and lightly roll to the desired shape. Fit to the pie plate. Put in a generous quantity of cherries or any of the other desirable fruits or berries of Summer.

Sprinkle well with sugar and then dredge with flour. The flour helps to thicken up the juice as it begins to flow in the process of cooking. Cornstarch may be used in place of flour for the dredging.

If there is to be a top crust wet the edge of the lower crust with cold water. Roll the top crust. Cut a few fancy holes in it with fork or knife to allow the steam to escape. Adjust the top crust to the bottom, pressing together with a fork. Unless the lower crust has been moistened with water the crusts will not stay together.

BRITONS SHUN PROSPECT OF ANOTHER WAR

Lloyd George's Statement On Polish Situation Is Shock

SEE BUSINESS THREATENED

Premier Is Target Of All Factions; U. S. Position Is Feared

BY ARTHUR S. DRAPER

London, July 24.—Europe has grown accustomed to shocks, crises and disappointments. Bonar Law recently said that a day which produced only one crisis was considered a holiday.

But when Premier Lloyd George told Parliament that the Polish situation had brought England to a crisis which meant war or peace the nation was surprised, shocked and angered. The possibility of another war, with its consequent drain of man power, finances and its disrupting influence on the life of the nation at a moment when the people are just beginning to find their feet seemed remote last Wednesday morning, but by nightfall it had assumed threatened proportions. Britain is mentally unprepared, however well prepared she may be materially and physically.

There will be no war with the Bolsheviki until Parliament has debated the question exhaustively. The European nations will not plunge into another big conflict as they tumbled into Armageddon. That mighty struggle taught many lessons, not the least of which is that it is easier to get into trouble than it is to get out.

If the British were unprepared for the Premier's announcement, it is equally true that Lloyd George was unprepared for the kaleidoscopic changes of the last week. His closest associates saw visions of an early resumption of trade with Russia and peace in eastern Europe. As in every country and in every governmet there are two rival parties, one for peace with Russia and the other for war. Premier Lloyd George is for peace.

TWO VIEWS REPRESENTED

Before the reply of the Soviet government was published the British press gave two widely divergent interpretations, in one reflecting the views of the "British peace with Russia" faction, the other reflecting the views of the "fight the Bolsheviki" group. This explains why on Tuesday morning some London journals said the armistice was about to be concluded, while others declared the Bolsheviki had flouted the British.

Premier Millerand characterised the Soviet reply as "impudent." Lloyd George called it quite incoherent.

There is a possibility of war with the Bolsheviki, but Britain will send mighty few troops to the assistance of Poland. Her contributions will be limited to munitions and materials Britain already has invested close to half a billion dollars in Russia. The Preimer's speech draws the fire of various sections of political opinion. Of course he is attacked vigorously by labor which a few months ago struck when an attempt was made to send ammunition to Poland.

Labor demands peace with the Bolsheviki and has no sympathy for what it calls "Polish aggression." The Liberals declared that the Premier has been compelled to rewrite the whole Treaty of Versailles and, though they support recent modifications, they cannot miss the political opportunity of pointing out that Lloyd George's policy upon which he carried the general elections is now being rewritten.

CONDEMN DELAY

The Conservatives condemn the Premier because he did not go to Poland's assistance earlier, rather than open negotiations with Bolshevik agents. Consequently, Lloyd George finds himself in a peculiarly unfortunate position, though there is no doubt that he sincerely desires peace in eastern Europe.

When the announcement was received here that America had lifted the Russia embargo British officials tried to hurry negotiations with the Soviet government. There was a fear that American business interests would get the advantage with Russia. The very day t Premier was telling the people a crisis had been reached the Britis press published a Washington despatch stating that restrictions on the importation of Russian ruble would soon be removed.

There is no unity among the nations in their attitude toward Russia. European political conditions are frightfully complex and variable. At the moment there is something approximating unity between Great Britain and France regarding the Russian situation, although before the Spa conference it was impossible for Lloyd George and Millerand to see eye to eye.

Nearly every step toward unity means a deal of bargaining and compromising on issues unrelated to the point at issue. England agrees with a French project in Germany or Syria or somewhere else on condition that France agrees to an English project in Russia. The United States says nothing, and her silence worries both Great Britain and France.

European politicians and soldiers are living in troublesome times, and there is bound to be a showdown before the summer is over The League of Nations, of which much is expected, is virtually impotent. For instance, after a long delay it was finally arranged to open a financial congress in Brussels this week. Invitations had been sent out to all the delegates, the secretariat had engaged rooms in Brussels, arranged for tickets and was ready for the meeting. At the eleventh hour the council of the league met in Paris and called off the conference until September to await a decision of the Supreme Council on the question of reparations.

The League of Nations has a wonderful machine, but it lacks fuel and an engineer. The permanent secretariat is a marvelous organisation, but it is handling police court news instead of international conflicts. The league must wait for America, and meanwhile the European nations must settle their problems in the old way.
